

Professional Site Launch

At epilepsy.com we are continually striving to provide our users with the most comprehensive and current epilepsy information. That is why we are excited to announce the upcoming launch of our new site geared towards healthcare professionals on or about December 1! With the launch of our new professional site in conjunction with our existing site we will now be able to bring the latest research findings and information in epilepsy treatment and diagnosis to both patients and clinicians. We believe that the knowledge and experience of the epilepsy experts who contribute to epilepsy.com/professionals, as well as their informed opinions will assist clinicians when caring for patients facing newly diagnosed epilepsy as well as patients struggling with epilepsy that has resisted the usual treatments.

Our Community Is Growing

Connecting with a community of people who understand the various aspects of living with epilepsy is an invaluable means of support not only for patients with epilepsy, but also their family and friends. No one understands the importance of community support better than epilepsy.com. In fact, we are pleased to announce the expansion of our community forum and the addition of a new feature: "Look Who's Talking." With this new feature users will be able to view the most current discussions as they relate to relevant content. Now, when you are searching epilepsy.com for information on the ketogenic diet, for example, you will be able to see what the community members have to say about it.

Live From New Orleans

In December, the American Epilepsy Society (AES; www.aesnet.org) will be holding its 58th Annual meeting in New Orleans, covering a range of epilepsy related topics. Our epilepsy.com team will be bringing you "live" interviews and articles on the latest findings in epilepsy treatment, leading theories on how epilepsy gets started, hormones and epilepsy, sleep and epilepsy and a variety of other topics. Stay tuned!

Poet Laureates Wanted

Epilepsy.com is now accepting poetry submissions to be posted in our poetry corner. If you are a writer and a person with epilepsy please send your submissions to jenna@epilepsyproject.org. The deadline for submission is January 1st. After our editorial team has looked over all submissions you will be notified of your selection status.
